HARD TO PLEASE.

Most People Are Very Particular About What They Drink-Something New.

Those who have been looking for a beve rage which is perfectly pure, healthful, delicious, and inexpensive, something which will not only quench thirst, but also create a healthy appetitie, tone up the system, and soothe the nerves, need search no longer; a telephone message or postal card will bring just what is wanted.

"Kling's Ambrosia" is the name of this long-desired drink; it is non-intoxicating, of a beautiful amber color, and with a full hop flavor, without the bitter and full hop flavor, without the bitter and unpleasantly rough taste of ordinary malt and hop tonics. While in no sense a medicine, it possesses many medicinal qualities, which make it an ideal tonic for tired, wornout people, those whose nerves are all unstrung, who "work themselves to death," and whose appetite needs renewing.

THEY DISCUSS THE INVITATION. Survivors of the Pickett Division to Meet and Consider It. The attendance on Pickett Camp's regular meeting at their hall (Fifth and Broad streets) last night was quite good, and Commander R. L. Maury presided, and the meeting opened with prayer by Chap-lain P. P. Winston. A circular letter was received from the Daughters of the Confederacy, requesting a donation from the camp to care for the graves of the Confederate officers who died in Federal prisons, and was referred to the Finance Committee, with power to act. The camp completed its corps of officers by electing the following: W. U.

second lieutenant-commander; J. D. Redwood, third lieutenant-commander; R. H. Smith, caller; P. P. Winston, chaplain. The letters published in the Dispatch several days ago, in which Colonel Frazier and a committee representing the Grand Army and Sons of Veterans or-ganizations of Philadelphia and vicinity extended very cordial invitations to the survivors of Pickett's Division to become their guests at the annual encampment, August 8th to 14th, at Washington Park, on the Delaware river, were read and heard with interest. Considerable dis-cussion followed as to whether only actual members of Pickett's Division were meant, or of Pickett Camp, the natural successor of the veteran organization. A number of the members expressed themselves, and characteristic and amusing was the remark of one old soldier with white hair and beard. He rose slowly in the midst of the somewhat heat-ed contention. "Gentlemen," he declared, "I am not going to say much about this matter, but you had better not push me. I'll fire my gun if you do, and you'll know what I am a thinking 'bout it if I do."
It was finally agreed that the Union veterans only wanted to meet those who faced them at Gettysburg, and Pickett Camp, on motion of Comrade J. D. Red-wood, graciously tendered the use of its hall for the survivors of that awful charge to meet in and consider the invitation.
This closed the business before the
